Investment objective

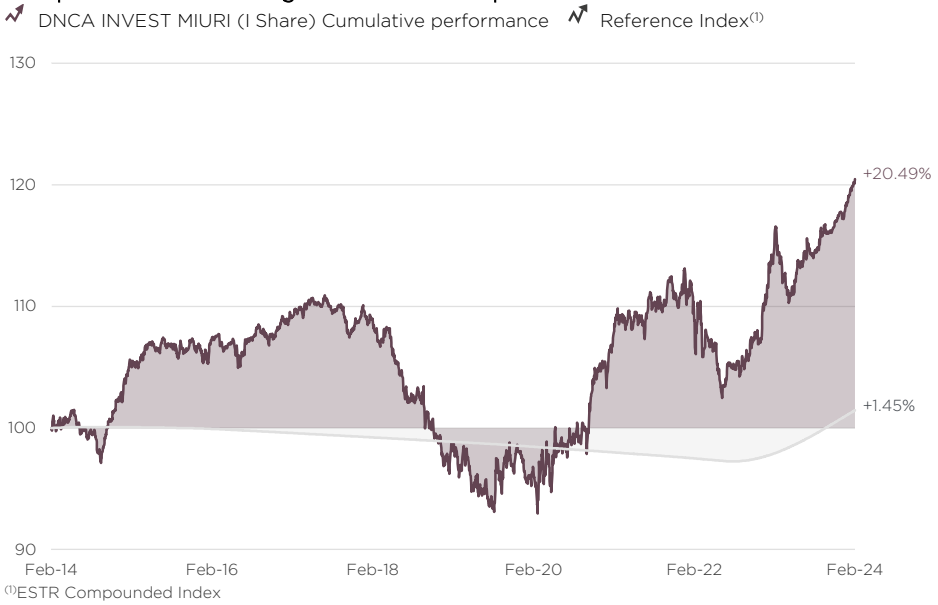

The Sub-Fund seeks to achieve a higher annual performance than the risk-free rate represented by the €STR rate, throughout the recommended investment period. For that purpose, the Management Company will try to maintain an average annual volatility between 5% and 10% in normal market conditions. Investor's attention is drawn by the fact that the management style is discretionary and integrates environmental, social/societal and governance (ESG) criteria.
To achieve its investment objective, the investment strategy is based on active discretionary management.

Portfolio managers comments

The markets continued to rise in February, with the Eurostoxx 50 and S&P 500 jumping by almost 5% across the board, taking the increase to over 20% since the low point in October 2023. US macroeconomic data played a large part in the market rally, against a backdrop in which the "soft landing" theme has been replaced by a "no landing" theme. The slowdown in inflation is slightly slower than anticipated a few months ago, shifting expectations of the first rate cut to June (c. 60% probability estimate). In Europe, the data remains mixed, but supports our view that a low point in activity, particularly in manufacturing, is behind us.

From a microeconomic point of view, February was the month in which almost all companies published their annual results. The messages, which we had expected to be very cautious, were marginally more constructive than we had feared, leading in some cases to spectacular stock market rallies that were not always correlated with valuations. We end this publication season reassured about the fund's positioning.

In February, DNCA Invest Miuri gained 1.17% compared with 0.31% for its benchmark index. The month's main contributors were Stellantis (+60bp), CRH (+46bp), Schneider (+44bp) and ASML (+36bp). These performances are all correlated with the communication of these companies during the publication of their annual results.

Over and above the results, we have identified in these publications an appetite on the part of investors for a return to shareholders, and in particular for share buybacks. Share buybacks underline companies' confidence in their ability to generate cash in what is still a complicated period (especially in Europe), and have the advantage of boosting EPS at a time when growth is in short supply.

Stellantis published results in line with expectations, presented a reassuring message and a generous shareholder return programme (dividend and share buyback). In our opinion, CRH is now the most attractive company in the construction sector, in terms of its past results, its solid outlook and the proposed return to shareholders.

Schneider has passed the 2024 guidance test. The Group has succeeded in reconciling the prudence required in this year of 'transition' in Europe with its ambitious and attractive long-term plan, targeting growth of 6% to 8%, in line with LT targets of 7% to 10%.

ASML is benefiting from its good publication and, more generally, from all the positive messages from companies exposed to the AI theme.

Conversely, BNPP (-24bp), Dassault Systèmes (-14bp) and Deutsche Telekom (-8bp) weighed negatively. The publication of BNPP's results was disappointing and we reduced our position. The same applies to Dassault Systèmes.

The fund ended the month with a net exposure of 5.7%, in line with our top-down and bottom-up views.

New entries include Pluxee, the Sodexo spin-off, NKT (Danish cable specialist).

Glossary

Beta. Measures the average extent to which a fund moves relative to the broader market. The beta of a market is 1. A fund with a beta of more than 1 moves on average to a greater extent than the market. A fund with a beta of less than 1 moves on average to a lesser extent. If beta is a minus number, it is likely that the stock and the market move in opposite directions.
CFD (Contract For Differences). An arrangement made in a futures contract whereby differences in settlement are made through cash payments, rather than the delivery of physical goods or securities.
Correlation coefficient. The correlation coefficient is a measure of correlation. It is used to determine the relationship between two assets over a given period. A positive coefficient means that the two assets move in the same direction. Conversely, a negative coefficient means that the assets move in the opposite direction. The correlation or decorrelation can be more or less strong and varies between -1 and 1.
Derivatives. The collective name used for a broad class of financial instruments that derive their value from other underlying financial instruments. Futures, options and swaps are all types of derivative.
Sharpe Ratio. A way of measuring the historical risk-adjusted return on an investment. It is the average previous return minus the risk-free return, divided by the standard deviation (a measure of risk that looks at the diversion of actual returns from expected returns).
Sharpe Ratio. The Sharpe ratio measures the excess return over the risk-free money rate of an asset portfolio divided by the standard deviation of that return. It is therefore a measure of the marginal return per unit of risk. It is used to measure the performance of managers with different risk policies.
Tracking error. Tracking Error is a measure of how closely an investment portfolio follows the index against which it is benchmarked. It is the difference in the return earned by a portfolio and the return earned by the benchmark against which the portfolio is constructed. For example, if a bond portfolio earns a return of 5.15% during a period when the portfolio's benchmark (say, for example, the Lehman Brothers Index) produces a return of 5.06%, the tracking error is .09%, or 9 basis points.
