Portfolio managers comments

The markets continued their correction in September, with the Eurostoxx 50 NR down 2.8%. The macroeconomic environment is particularly difficult to read. The United States continues to land softly, while Europe reports deteriorating indicators. Inflation remains the most worrying factor for the markets, as it dictates central bank policies. While the ECB has opened the door to an end to rate hikes, the FED has reopened its door, triggering a wave of nervousness. At the same time, some European countries could start to worry about their financing conditions, given the deficits of most of the continent's countries. The next few weeks and their indicators will be key, with inflation figures under closer scrutiny than ever. The next FED meeting (1er November) will liven up the third-quarter publication season, and will probably take precedence over it among investors. In terms of positioning, investors will have to decide between value, which is positively correlated with high interest rates, and long duration, which is unfavourably correlated with interest rates but which generally offers protection against a slowdown in growth.

The messages delivered by companies in September were broadly in line with those of July. Nevertheless, we note a series of cautious notes from financial analysts on the luxury goods sector. Most of these were technical, pointing to the risk of a slowdown from a high starting point.

In September, VENASQUO fell by -0.25% compared with -1.25% for its benchmark. Stocks that contributed positively included Stellantis, Vinci, Intercontinental and Holcim. Other stocks that outperformed their benchmark were Inditex and Publicis. Stellantis held up well against the impact of the negotiations in the United States, and we share this optimism. It is the most profitable of the volume carmakers, and we believe it will be able to withstand a rise in wages in North America. What's more, the current valuation already incorporates a very unfavourable scenario for the group's future profitability. The month's underperformers to which the fund is exposed are Saint-Gobain, Cap Gemini, Sopra and STM.

Saint-Gobain has probably suffered from the rise in oil prices as the group pursues its initiatives to accelerate its energy transition. Sopra and Cap Gemini suffered slightly from Accenture's results and we believe that the messages delivered by both companies in Q3 will be important. The semiconductor industry is suffering from nervousness about the outlook for the industrial and consumer electronics sectors.

VENASQUO ended the month with 53.2% exposure to its performance indicator.

Glossary

Beta. Measures the average extent to which a fund moves relative to the broader market. The beta of a market is 1. A fund with a beta of more than 1 moves on average to a greater extent than the market. A fund with a beta of less than 1 moves on average to a lesser extent. If beta is a minus number, it is likely that the stock and the market move in opposite directions.
CFD (Contract For Differences). An arrangement made in a futures contract whereby differences in settlement are made through cash payments, rather than the delivery of physical goods or securities.
Correlation coefficient. The correlation coefficient is a measure of correlation. It is used to determine the relationship between two assets over a given period. A positive coefficient means that the two assets move in the same direction. Conversely, a negative coefficient means that the assets move in the opposite direction. The correlation or decorrelation can be more or less strong and varies between -1 and 1.
Derivatives. The collective name used for a broad class of financial instruments that derive their value from other underlying financial instruments. Futures, options and swaps are all types of derivative.
Sharpe Ratio. A way of measuring the historical risk-adjusted return on an investment. It is the average previous return minus the risk-free return, divided by the standard deviation (a measure of risk that looks at the diversion of actual returns from expected returns).
Sharpe Ratio. The Sharpe ratio measures the excess return over the risk-free money rate of an asset portfolio divided by the standard deviation of that return. It is therefore a measure of the marginal return per unit of risk. It is used to measure the performance of managers with different risk policies.
Tracking error. Tracking Error is a measure of how closely an investment portfolio follows the index against which it is benchmarked. It is the difference in the return earned by a portfolio and the return earned by the benchmark against which the portfolio is constructed. For example, if a bond portfolio earns a return of 5.15% during a period when the portfolio's benchmark (say, for example, the Lehman Brothers Index) produces a return of 5.06%, the tracking error is .09%, or 9 basis points.
